HIS FATHERHOOD.

COVENTRY PATMORE.
Coventry Kearsley Dighton Patmore was the epic poet of wedded love and life. His longer poems, "The Angel in the House" and "The Victories of Love," are worthy of more general fame than now belongs to them. He was born in 1851 at Woodford, near London. My little son, who look'd from thoughtful eyes, And mov'd and spoke in quiet, grown-up wise, Having my law the seventh time disobeyed, I struck him, and dismiss'd! With hard words and unkind, His mother, who was patient, being dead, Then, fearing lest his grief should hinder sleep, I visited his bed, But found him slumbering deep, With dark'ning eyelids, and his lashes yet From his late sobbing wet. And I, with moan, Kissed away his tears, left others of my own; For, on a table-dragon beside his head, He had put, within his reach, A box of counters and a red veined stone, A piece of glass abraded by the beach, And six or seven shells, A bottle with bluebells, And two French copper coins, ranged there With careful art, To comfort his sad heart, So when that child I pray'd I might I might, and said, Ah, when at last, when with strained breath, Not venturing thee in death, And thou rememb'rest of what toys We made our joys, How weakly understood Thy great commandment good, Then, fatherly, not less Than I whom thou hast mold'ed from the clay, Thou'lt leave thy wrath and say: "I will be sorry for their childishness."

Fruit trees are in full bloom.

The Report of the Sport Committee.

Since the suggestion made by Rondo some time ago, in regard to the vital importance and great need of having a free and commodious skating rink erected in Greenville, we, as a committee, have taken the matter up and have made a thorough canvass of the sentiment of the people, and now beg leave to submit the following report: We find some antagonism and opposition to Rondo's proposition it not being sufficiently broad and comprehensive so as to include the interest and to court the favor of all the sporting classes. That while all the skating participants are highly elated with the idea, and agree to subscribe liberally, there are other classes of sporting people who say that they will oppose any and all discrimination and favoritism that may be proposed in sporting circles. There is one class who say that they have spent much time and means in acquiring a habit and cultivating a talent to wield the cue in the games of billiards and pool, and feel that their profession and interest should not be ignored, but recognized, and that if a free pool and billiard room shall be included in the proposed skating building that they will co-operate and subscribe; that with a free pool room they would be able to do a more extensive business of sport and fun, and would certainly build up a large trade. Another class who say that they have no talent or tact for skating, billiards or pool, but have a strong disposition and a well cultivated talent for rolling the ten pins and box-ball, that they have spent all the time that they have had a chance in forming a habit and disposition for such sport, but that at present they are out of business, and are deprived of the practice of their profession, on the account of high license tax and house rent, and now have no opportunity to exercise their talent and genius or to do any business whatever, and they think that they ought to be recognized and if a free box room shall be included in the building proposed that they will co-operate and subscribe, that with a free box room they could run regular and do a lively business.

There is another thing that all parties seem to agree upon, as a unit, that there shall be included in the proposed building a large banquet and reception hall, to be supplied with all kinds of refreshments and the very best of soft drinks, to be used for all kinds of entertainments and receptions. It is thought that such a department in the building would give vigor and life to every other department of the house.

Now upon a careful and liberate consideration, we, the committee, believe, that a house for all can be built with a sufficient capacity of departments to accommodate all the idlers and sporting people of the town, by forming a combination of all that are interested in such a house, with an avowed understanding that the house shall be of the people, by the people, and for the people, giving everybody an equal chance and choice to exercise their talent and taste in the kind of sport and fun that they may desire. Equal right to all, exclusive privilege to none, to be the placard of the building, and that every department is to be supplied with first class pianos and select music, which always gives vigor and life to all games of sport. We believe that under such considerations that a bond issue can be easily voted for $50,000 and an annual tax be levied to pay the accruing interest on bonds, the current Another element and class who state that they have both talent and disposition for the sport of dancing, a profession that is old and honorable, and which has long been a custom and practice among the highest types of society, and they feel that they should be recognized, with the other sporting fraternity; that at present they are deprived of the pleasure and gratification of such sport, on account of Greenville having no suitable dancing hall. They say that dancing is much nicer than skating, more elegant and less dangerous, and that Greenville should have a large dancing hall, which would attract widespread attention, and if a large dancing hall shall be included in the proposed building that they will co-operate and subscribe.

There is another class, who say that they have no special taste or turn for any of the rougher kinds of amusement or sport, but have cultivated quite a liking and disposition for social clubs where they can meet and pass the time so pleasantly by engaging in all kinds of innocent card games and other fashionable entertainments, read Shakespeare, fiction and up-to-date periodicals of romance, recite and interpret difficult conundrums and puzzles; they say that novel reading is a short hand method of learning human nature, that by reading Shakespeare and romance an hour, they can learn more about human nature than they can learn from experience and observation of a whole year of actual life, and that if a free club room shall be included in the proposed building that they will co-operate and subscribe.

There is another class who say that they have no special taste for anything outside of a show and theatrical exhibitions, altho the world is said to be a vast theatre and the people are the actors, and life is a show, that such does not present human nature and human characteristics, so vivid, so charming, so natural and so impressive as do theatrical exhibitions, that the productions of a theatre is the highest course that can be taken in the school of sport and the amusements of life, and is the very capstone and climax of all frolic and fun and bears the finishing touch of poetry and song. They say that they are tired of having to look at one horse shows in a one horse hall, and that Greenville should have a large theatrical hall, well arranged, and have an exhibition every night the year round, that the people would then begin to catch on and get some knowledge of human nature of its virtues and villainies, and if a large free theatrical hall be included in the building that they will co-operate and subscribe.

expenses of running the house, and create a sinking fund for the liquidation of the bonds, when due.

We find that the opinion of many is that the most suitable site for the house, is the vacant lot on Main street between the Star store and Mayhugh's shop, which has a fronting of about 80 feet and a depth of about 150, and by erecting a three story building over the entire lot, there would be room for every department of sport. We further believe that such a house would greatly enhance the value of property and rapidly increase the population of the town, so that in a short time, Greenville would be quite a city; that as soon as the house was completed and put in operation, there would be a general influx of people from all parts of the country, far and near, and all the idlers and all those that have no special pecuniary interest at stake, and have no aspirations or desires for any, would move to town and buy or rent property, and all those who have grown rich and have become tired of business life would come to town and bring their families, to give their children a chance to enjoy the pleasures of life, and persons living abroad, who have relations, friends and acquaintances, would make frequent and long visits to Greenville. New hotels would have to be built, the traveling public and drumming fraternity would make Greenville headquarters, produce would be in demand, and provision would find ready sale. The public sporting house would be the attraction and magnet of the town, a nucleus about which would gather all the sporting element, and Greenville would become more noted than any watering place or seashore resort, its attractions would be ever and perpetual, night and day the year round, while the others are only periodical. No doubt that such a house on Main street, lit up with electric lights and voiced with delightful strains of music and melody, and all the departments running in full blast would be a grand sight. A select schoolhouse, supplied with select faculties of Harvard or Yale would not be in it a bit, and preachers could not preach loud enough to be heard within the corporate limits.

Our report is favorably received, by those concerned, we would suggest that a speedy consummation of what we have recommended be made.

H. STIVERS,<
